DDI ACTIVITY REPORT ITEM
(27 September - 1 October 1965)

General Carroll has accepted an expanded and modified National Intelligence Survey on Subversion and Insurgency as an appropriate Agency response to his request for support to meet the counterinsurgency requirements of the U. and S. commands. This will permit DIA to cease publication of its departmental Cold War Counterinsurgency Analysis studies in favor of the coordinated, national intelligence the NIS will bring to this critical problem. The NIS unit will assess the internal stability of a nation, describing the primary sources of popular discontent and noting those geographic, political, social and economic factors that favor the rise of dissidence or insurgency, as well as identifying the subversive forces and their potential to undermine national strength. Twelve of these units will be produced annually with priority given to the critical countries.
